ZF Aftermarket was recently awarded "Supplier of the Year 2023" by Groupauto International (GAI) at their annual Congress held in Istanbul. Securing the event's most coveted award confirms its commitment to innovative solutions and strong customer service.

Philippe Colpron, Head of ZF Aftermarket, accepted the award and expressed his gratitude, saying, "We are humbled and honored to receive this award, and it highlights our continuous commitment to better serving our customers. It also motivates us to work even harder and remain dedicated to our customers as we continue to advance the industry and the servitization of the mobility ecosystem."

GAI, the international dealer network of spare parts and services for both passenger cars and commercial vehicles, grants the 'Supplier of the Year' award annually to recognize outstanding performance among its supplier partners. The votes that result in the award are based on business conducted within the GAI network at 15,734 points of sale in 109 countries. Evaluation criteria include product and program quality, as well as business transactions of the suppliers with the individual members of the wholesale group. These transactions are assessed based on factors like availability, service level of delivery, technical support, marketing and sales support, and other services.

Colpron emphasized, "In an increasingly complex world, we aim to offer trust, simplicity and convenience while continually delivering superior added value. Our customers can always rely on us for their business of today and tomorrow through a comprehensive and qualitative portfolio, empowering them to thrive in the market and secure their own growth."
